

MICHAEL CHARLES MAIBACH

THE PORCH LIGHT

It's said that women,
Just want to be loved.
And men to be needed,
This word from Above.

The woman's dilemma
If he's inattentive,
Is how to engage him?
She must be inventive.

So at her own porch light
She smacks with a bat!
And asks him to help her
Replace one like that.

Choosing a new light
Together that day,
He affixes it firmly,
She asks him to stay.

They sit by the fire,
With cookies and tea,
She smiles to herself,
He says, "lucky me".

The moral of the story
Is right there for you.
Make the man of your life
Feel helpful and true.

This may not win favor
With every dear lass,
But I've seen for myself
How this comes to pass.
