

MICHAEL CHARLES MAIBACH

LEAVE ME ALONE!

"Leave me alone!", she cried,
And quickly ran away.
She was leaving him -
He'd been her night and day.

She reached for "freedom" now,
This sounded brave and true.
The mistress of her ship,
She'd finally have her due.

The next day opened free,
To do as she would please,
Sleeping late perhaps -
Then finding boys to tease.

She stayed at bars too late,
And drank too very much.
She learned the latest jokes,
Bet ponies on a hunch.

She kissed a hundred frogs,
Their names were soon unknown.
What was her life about,
With heart so all alone?

Her mirror spoke to her,
It asked "Just what's your plan,
Now that you're on your own,
Without your dear sweet man?"

She quickly turned away,
Yet came so many tears.
"Life's better shared", she knew,
"He's gone", she then did fear.

MICHAEL CHARLES MAIBACH

Despite how late the night,
In haste she left her home.
Heart pounding quickly now,
"Is my man for me alone?"

Tapped softly at his door,
Hands now pressed to her chest,
What should she say to him,
What words would serve her best?

Dim light then softened her,
Now through his opened door,
She fell into his arms,
Alone she was no more...
